

SECRETS OF THE SILK ROAD

AT THE BOWERS MUSEUM OF CULTURAL ARTS INCLUDING LUNCH AT CAFE CHINA

Available March 27 - July 25, 2010

The Bowers Museum of Cultural Arts is playing host to one of the most fascinating exhibits to come to Southern California in 2010 -- "The Secrets of the Silk Road." Strikingly well-preserved mummies tall in stature and fair in complexion have lain in the parched Tarim Basin of western China for 3,800 years. Wearing Western-influenced textiles and possessing surprising technologies and customs, just who these extraordinary people were is a mystery! This historic exhibition of 150 objects drawn from the Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region Museum and the Xinjiang Institute of Archaeology in Urumqi, China reveals surprising details about the people who lived along the ancient Silk Road. For the first time ever, three of the more than 100 Caucasian mummies found and preserved in the western China's inhospitable desert sands are being presented in the United States. An impressive array of objects are included in the exhibition to represent the full extent of the Silk Road, where lavish goods, technologies and ideas between East and West were adopted and exchanged. This amazing day also includes an all-you-can-eat Chinese buffet luncheon before visiting the museum. Book early as space is limited and the exhibit is expected to sell out.
